

MR. WENDELL PHILLIPS ON THE ADMINISTRATION AND THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

A tolerably fair audience assembled at the Cooper Institute last evening to hear Wendell Phillips on the progress topics of the time. His special subject had been announced as follows: "Reject the Amendment—Deport the President." —
Arlen M. Powell, Editor of The Anti-Slavery Standard, called the meeting to order, and introduced Mr. Phillips, who was received with applause, and spoke as follows:

ADDRESS OF WENDELL PHILLIPS.

LAURENCE AND GENTLEMEN: This is the 25th day of October, 1866. On the 25th day of October, 1865, standing on this platform, I ventured to say that the President of the United States, instead of being a mistaken friend was a determined enemy of the Republic, that, instead of being a comrade to be recruited, he was a foe to be opposed—indeed a bough to hide behind, he was an obfuscate to be removed. I ventured to say that the Republican, defeated in Virginia, had taken up its headquarters in the White House. But one of my audience accepted my statement, and nine-tenths received it with his silent indignation. As a result year had rolled over our heads since, and I think if the question was taken in any audience in the land to-night, the number that disengaged from me then would agree with me to-day. [Applause.]

So much the events of the year have taught us. Well, friends, my position, as I understand it, to-night, is to warn you again that the danger from that quarter has not ceased, but that greater dangers now threaten us. The Federalists, in the White House, in its next year to sweep under the dome of the Capitol, and in the Senate House and House of Representatives. It takes possession of one section of the Government, its present position a take possession of the other. The next year it will take possession of the third.

One who has been a leader of the rebellion has always been, I suppose, in the insulation, the hate, the inhumanity, the distrust in our ranks. One of the great works of Demosthenes is that it is too much to trust your enemies to what they have wrought. The hate to-day is to reconstruct the form of the Republic in which exists the oligarchy of a great minority. It is not so safe. Without doubt, without question, without doubt, that the masses of the people, the majority, warned would save it from any enemy.
